Steve Philion of Red Lake County
By Bruce Strand

Red Lake County coach Steve Philion collected his 600th victory on Feb. 6 when the Rebels defeated Fosston 67-54.

The retired mathematics teacher has coached for 46 seasons, counting a few years as an assistant. He previously coached Gonvick-Trail and Clearbrook-Gonvick and had state tournament teams in 1992 and 1993 with Clearbrook-Gonvick. Overall, Philion has collected 19 conference titles. His total record is currently 601-470.

Red Lake County consists of students from Red Lake Falls, Oklee, and Plummer. Philion attended Red Lake Falls High School, where he earned 16 letters in baseball, basketball, football, track and golf. Philion’s daughter, Nikki Gullingsrud, is a volleyball and basketball coach at Red Lake Falls after stints at Win-E-Mac and Ada-Borup. His sons Kevin and Kurt played for him. Philion is also a longtime football official and Kevin officiates with him. Son-in-law Mike Gullingsrud officiates in several sports.

Steve Philion and Dave Cresap are the 10th and 11th Minnesota boys coaches to win at least 600 games. It happens that three more are very close: Lakeville North’s John Oxton (599 after Tuesday), Tartan’s Mark Klingsporn (596) and Anoka’s Jeffrey Wahl (593).

Dave Cresap of Perham
By Bruce Strand

Dave Cresap’s Perham Yellowjackets remained undefeated on Saturday by fending off one of the toughest teams on their schedule. That win by Class 2A’s No. 6 Yellowjackets over No. 9 Osakis, 65-58, was also Cresap’s 600th.

Cresap deflected the focus from himself. “Without good kids and without good coaches around you, you never reach 600 wins,” he told the Fargo Forum. “I have been blessed and honored to be the head basketball coach in Perham. I hope I represent the town well.”

Cresap’s record is 601-275 in 25 years at Perham and 10 in North Dakota. He’s had four state tournament teams, in 2011, 2012, 2013 and 2019. An elementary teacher who also coaches tennis, Cresap played for Hawley, Fergus Falls CC, and Valley City State.

Cresap praised his current team that “has really exceeded our expectations” by going 19-0. Against Osakis, Finn Diggins scored 22 points, Elijah Morris 17 and Charlie Rasmussen 13. Daniel Savageau and Bauer Klimek scored 17 each for Osakis.

Walker-Hackensack-Akeley trio has over 4,600 points

Walker-Hackensack-Akeley’s girls team boasts a 2,000-point scorer and two other players over 1,000 points, coach Jim Lien reports.

Brianna Raddatz, 5-8 point guard averaging 18.2 points, got her 2,000th on Feb. 1 during a 67-64 win over Mountain Iron-Buhl. She currently has 2,063 points and has broken the previous school record, which was 1,777 by Maxine Smith, Class of 2015.

Megan Benjamin, 6-1 post averaging 12.8 points, has 1,311 points. Justin Day, 5-9 forward averaging 17.2 points, has 1,256 points.

The trio with over 4,600 points combined has led the Wolves to a 21-2 record and No. 4 ranking in Class 1A this season, and a 70-14 record the last three years.

Megan Benjamin (12), Brianna Raddatz, and Justine Day (33) of the W-H-A Wolves.
BOLD, top-ranked in Class 1A boys, was dislodged from the unbeaten ranks by Minnewaska Area 78-66 on Feb. 6. BOLD had won its first 19 games.

Peyton Johnsrud tallied 28 points to lead Minnewaska (14-6) as they reversed a 64-51 loss to BOLD on Jan. 3. Grant Jensen scored 16 points, Aaron Ver Steeg 14 and Luke Barkeim 12 for the Lakers. Jordan Sagedahl hit 24 points for BOLD. Drew Sagedahl added 18 points, Gavin Vosika 16 and Matt Morse 10.

"We contested the majority of their shots and made them settle early for a lot of jump shots," Minnewaska coach Phil Johnsrud said. "We were aggressive attacking their pressure and quickness, and we were still able to have timely possessions, keeping the ball out of their hands."

"Minnewaska is a heck of a team. Big, physical, athletic and can shoot it," said BOLD coach Jake Brusteun.

This marked the fifth straight year that they’ve split in conference play. BOLD was 20-2 last year when the Lakers clipped them 65-50 in their second meeting.

The Warriors (21-1) stayed on the hot-seat by edging No. 7 Springfield 80-78 the next night, with Jordan Sagedahl sinking 29 points and Vosika 25, then outlasting Redwood Valley 93-89 on Tuesday in another shoot-out.

Seven unbeaten teams remain in the state -- the Eden Prairie, St. Croix Prep, Perham, and Southwest Minnesota Christian boys, and the Hopkins, Marshall and Pelican Rapids girls.

Mankato East sophomore Mackenzie Schweim recently passed 1,000 points. She’s averaging 18 points and 13 rebounds, and had a 39-point game to lead a 73-70, triple-overtime win over Northfield on Feb. 4. Schweim 6-for-11 on three’s in that game including one that sent the game to overtime. She poured in 15 points in the three overtimes. The Mankato East record for girls is 1,989 by Amy Swanson. Katie Borowicz, last of three high-scoring guards at Roseau, has been offered a scholarship by Minnesota Gophers coach Lindsay Whalen, the Fargo Forum reports. Borowicz, a junior guard, is averaging 32.6 points. Oldest sister Kylie played two seasons for Minnesota State-Moorhead before a health issue forced her out, and middle sister Kacie, last year’s Miss Basketball, is a freshman guard at North Dakota. The three sisters won a state title together in 2017.

Grant McBroom sank a three-pointer at the buzzer to give Class 1A’s No. 5 ranked Waterville-Elysian-Morristown a 53-52 win over No. 10 Blooming Prairie on Tuesday. WEM (21-1) has edged Blooming Prairie (18-3) twice in Gopher Conference play. The score was 64-60 in their first duel.

Cretin-Derham Hall, No. 3 in Class 3A, was upset by Woodbury 82-78 on Friday in a Suburban East Conference game at Woodbury. Bradley Cimperman scored 28 points and Parker McMorrow 23 for Woodbury (13-7). Amari Carter hit 23 and Curtis Jones 22 for the Raiders (17-3). Their scoring leader J’vonne Hadley played only 14 minutes and sank eight points, while star guard Tre Holloman had an off-night, shooting 1-for-10 for three points. The Raiders share the SEC lead with East Ridge, each 12-1. They’ll meet in the SEC finale Feb. 28.

In our recent article on northern Minnesota basketball, specifically how its decline has coincided with the Iron Range economic decline, we listed state champs from up north, noting that Esko in 2014 was the only Iron Range champ since 1991. Our listing of champs from up north omitted Barnum in 1983, which a radio sportscaster from the Range sent an e-mail to point out. A check of the map shows it’s about 37 miles south of Duluth, so Barnum should have been included.

Don “Skip” Dolan of Annandale coached against Arthur “Skip” Wright, new head coach for New London-Spicer, twice this year. Asked if this was the first time in his four decades that he’s coached against another “Skip,” Dolan said yes, it was. They had a chuckle about it Feb. 6 while exchanging introductions with the referees. “When the officials shook our hands, and we both said ‘Skip,’ three times, each of them looked at us like we were trying to play a joke on them. But we said ‘No really.’ And they laughed.” Wright is 64 but became a head coach for the first time this year. Skip Dolan added an “it’s a small world” note -- Skip Wright’s daughter is married to the son of Greg Mulder, who was Skip Dolan’s teammate on state tournament teams at Renville in the 1970’s. Annandale, incidentally, beat NLS in both games.
Red Rock Central catches fire from 3-point range

Red Rock Central, and particularly Sam Helmer, went on a three-point rampage in a 71-38 win over Edger-ton on Feb. 6, coach Brian Walker reports. The Falcons (15-15, and averaging 54 points) were 16-for-26 overall, led by senior guard Helmer, shooting 9-for-15 for all of his 27 points. They were a blistering 14-for-17 in the first half, with Selmer 8-for-10, to take a 61-15 lead. They added just 10 points in the second half as the pace slowed considerably. Helmer is averaging 13.9 points. Both Helmer and the team are hitting 34 percent on three’s for the season. (State boys individual 3-point single-game records are 20 total by Cash Eggleston of Minnesota Transitions in 2005 and 8-for-8 by three players for best percentage. Team records are Sleepy Eye with 24 total in 2011 and Ada-Borup going 12-for-13 in 2012 for best percentage.)
Keeping girls in the game by coaching them differently

By Marianne Engle, Ph.D
Specialist in child and adolescent psychology

One of the issues we frequently address is how a lack of fun is increasingly driving our kids out of sports—and girls in particular are dropping out. New data shows girls abandon sports at 1.5 times the rate that boys do.

This disproportionate dropout rate shows that we clearly need to better address girls’ challenges and find ways to nurture their love of sport. There’s one person positioned better than just about anyone else to help level the playing field for girls: their coach.

The Women’s Sports Foundation found that girls who like their coaches are more likely to (1) keep playing (2) see the importance of being active and (3) love their sport. Coaches who utilize supportive coaching practices that address girls’ challenges and nurture their love of sport are vital in getting and keeping girls involved.

Lisa Haag, head cross country and track & field coach at Calvary Christian High School in Clearwater, Florida, has generated significant enthusiasm among students during her first year of coaching the program. “When I coach, my goal is to make practice be the best time of their day,” said Haag. “I am trying to make them love what they do. Everyone likes to have fun, so I try to set the stage early of what my expectations are when it’s time to work.”

Girls have a different set of cultural experiences than boys do, especially when it comes to sports. “Soccer, on a tactical level, is the same no matter who is playing,” said Meagan Frank, head girls and boys soccer coach at Menomonee High School in Wisconsin. “But the way they play, girls are much more in a cooperative sense, they want to engage with each other as they play, and boys really like the physicality part. They play a different style of the game when they play.”

FIGHT PERFECT WITH PROCESS

-Many girls face a lot of pressure to be perfect, but with a success mind set, they can harness that pressure, bounce back from failure, and prepare themselves to use their physical and mental skills when they need them. Rather than celebrating getting it right, coaches should emphasize focusing on the process that got them to that victory.

Taking risks and trying new things can both feel like incredibly high stakes situations, but if a coach focuses on what’s controllable—working hard, sticking with something, being brave—they’ll realize putting in the effort is just as important as winning. Showing girls that it’s ok to not be perfect—and sharing examples of when you weren’t perfect—are powerful ways to gain their trust and make them feel safe making their own mistakes.

SHUT DOWN STRESS

Nervous anticipation before a game is to be expected when participating in sports, but high levels of stress can destroy enjoyment and wreck an athlete’s performance before she’s even on the court. Girls can face different stressors than boys: family responsibilities, such as caring for younger siblings, cultural expectations that sports are not really for them, body image concerns and feeling self-conscious, and even threats to their physical safety. It is important to make sure their team itself isn’t creating additional stress.

Providing an environment where girls feel safe and know they can trust you and their teammates will allow you to help each member of the team be in the best position to learn and have fun. Some coaches feel that it helps to build team camaraderie—and cuts down on disruptive side conversations later—by allowing time in the schedule for their girls to socialize before practice.

“I have certainly noticed a difference in need for social time,” said Frank. “Girls like to see each other and look at each other. So if you are a coach and you are trying to get their attention, for girls if they haven’t had that time to have eye contact and space with each other in that kind of circle moment, then you really don’t have them, or have them connected to each other.”
LEAD BY EXAMPLE

Two core values in sports are honesty and integrity. These values are a natural fit when it comes to the code of conduct for a team: Get your team involved in creating this and make sure they know how important it is that integrity and honesty are part of the code of conduct for them both on and off the field.

While girls aren’t a monolithic group there are some universal issues they face. Gender bias can play out in sports in the way that we perceive girls’ abilities and actions. “I haven’t found girls to be fragile,” said Haag. “They aren’t crying when we have to work on something, they aren’t emotionally fragile. Some people may think that they have to be a little gentler with the girls, but I haven’t really found that to be the case, at all.”

When you see a girl giving commands, do you think she is bossy? Or is she a leader? We have to be aware of this thinking because we can’t change what we don’t see. An easy way to start confronting your own biases—and we all have them—is to reflect and ask yourself, “Did I treat her like a girl? Or did I treat her like an athlete?”

The character and confidence girls gain through sports are the very tools they need to become the leaders of tomorrow. Coaches can model good decision-making, provide support and share their own experiences so that girls understand what they are going through is normal. Having a meaningful and positive relationship with her coach can go a long way to helping make a girl feel like she belongs, both on the team and in sports as a whole.
